Background:

Prof. Jacq Christmas is an Associate Professor of Computer Science (AI and machine learning) at the University of Exeter.

She is part of Dstl's Defence Data Research Centre (DDRC), which is a collaboration between Exeter and the universities of Surrey and Liverpool, and a member of Exeter's Institute for Data Science and Artificial Intelligence.

Her research is predominantly aimed at the defence and security sectors, helping the Royal Navy to make launch & recovery operations safer under a wider operating envelope, and the Metropolitan Police to identify criminals more quickly and cost effectively.

Jacq has spent many years working in industry before returning to academia to complete a PhD in 2011, and is now the Director of Business Engagement & Innovation for the Computer Science department.

Join Western Joint Branch as Jacq asks the questions: What is AI?
